Due to technical issues in the proposals reception last week, the FOWT's organisational committee has decided to extend the call for papers' deadline by October 25th, 2017.

Marseille and its beautiful sunny Mediterranean setting will once again host the world's largest floating offshore wind event (FOWT) on 25 and 26 April 2018.

If you want to make a presentation, please refer to the attachment for all necessary information and application guidelines. Submission deadline : October 25th, 2017.

The large success of this year's edition, gathering around 600 attendees from 20 different countries, has prompted the organizer to set-up again an international scientific and technical committee who's task it will be to select the most pertinent presentations as well round-table' compositions and topics : please refer to the attachment for all necessary information and application guidelines.

For this edition, FOWT 2018 will focus on "Leading commercial deployment", Darius Snieckus, Editor-in-Chief of Recharge will moderate the 2 days conference.

FOWT's main objective is to continue proposing new, varied and relevant presentations where the biggest names and the most reputable international experts meet annually.

The organizers are expecting well in excess of 800 specialist attendees next year, with many large foreign delegations already confirming their presence.

We're waiting your proposals and if you any questions, you can contact us at :
